A message from Uni-Prop

As the UK lockdown continues, we firmly believe the Construction and General Building industries will be amongst the very first to spearhead a return to work. Let's hope. There seems no doubt, however, there will be changes to how the workplace will have to operate until such time as the vaccine arrives and everything can then return to normal. In the meantime, may I wish you all the very best for your business going forward.

Here at Uni-Prop we have been continuing to supply urgent and necessary orders so we are operating on a "business as usual" basis albeit with reduced staffing. The special feature of being able to quickly convert Uni-Prop into a hydraulic acrow has proved beyond any doubt to result in significant savings on time and labour. If, like many businesses, you are reviewing your construction needs then please visit uni-prop.com to discover how Uni-Prop can best support your business. Please be assured that we will continue to honour the many quotes pending at the outset of the lockdown and we also look forward to servicing new enquiries in the near future.

As a company, we are using this period to develop our take on the standard trench strut, samples of which will be available from May 2020. In addition to being galvanised, we have also innovated special new features for our range that include anti-slip pins and a simple foldaway handle design meaning having to tape these up is a thing of the past. More on this exciting development soon.

We are a relatively new business so like many we have been challenged by this unprecedented event but we remain determined to see it through and look forward to being of service to you soon.

Keep well and best regards,

David Marr
